FOREWORD

If anyone could be called "a typical New Englander", I believe my father, Lyndon Moody Johnson, and my mother, Nellie Etta Mitchell, would qualify. For nine generations since the landing of their immigrant ancestors, a span of over three hundred years, the direct and allied lines of antecedents in both families have resided in only three of our New England states; namely, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Maine.

Apparently, for them, no other part of the country afforded greater inducements than New England could offer. They loved the nearby sea, the rocky land, and the beautiful lakes and forests; and they were content to struggle for existence and wrest a livelihood from this particular area of our country. I doubt if my parents ever traveled farther than from Maine to Massachusetts, yet they were not provincial in thought. Both were omniverous readers and seemed well-informed.

It has been an interesting and absorbing task to search these genealogical lines and trace the forebears of my parents, and it gives me great pleasure to dedicate this volume in loving memory to my father and mother.

PART ONE

EXPLANATORY NOTES

This is a compilation of data from others who have seemed to present authentic genealogical facts and figures, as well as the records could supply. There is a recorded account for all that is enclosed herein except for a few instances, which are clearly indicated, where conclusions appeared evident from original records. The evidence is offered, with footnote references, and the reader can be the judge of its authenticity. For the rest, genealogies, town histories, vital records, wills and deeds have been the sources of information, and are so stated.

The Johnson and Mitchell lines appear in Part One at the beginning of the book. All allied lines follow in Part Two, alphabetically arranged, with references at the end of each family line. An asterisk in front of a name indicates that the family of that person is carried on in the next generation. A number following a name, for example, James[3] Johnson, indicates the generation from the immigrant ancestor or from the first known resident in America. A first name in parentheses following a surname states the given name of the father. An appendix in Part Three contains additional material which may be of interest, including some wills, depositions, petitions, and estate settlements.

Abbreviations are obvious: B. or b. - birth, bp. - baptized, D. or d. - died, M. or m. - married, R. - residence, a - about, p - perhaps, dau. - daughter, d. y. - died young, liv. - living, bet. - between, rem. - removed, n. i. - no issue, adm. - administration.

Descendants are eligible for membership in the Society of Mayflower Descendants through the Mitchell line to Francis Cooke and Isaac Allerton and through the Johnson-Pease lines to John Howland and John Tilley.

The compiler of this volume wishes to express sincere appreciation to John Page Sherman for his encouragement and cooperation, and for his gifts of time and energy, so freely given. Grateful thanks go to Ruth Wilder Sherman for contributing knowledgeable aid, and to the many others who have answered letters and given assistance.

EDMUND[1] JOHNSON was one of the first comers to Winnicunet (Hampton), New Hampshire, arriving the first summer with Stephen Batchelder and others. He received several grants of land in Hampton, a houselot, two lots of fresh meadow, sixteen acres of salt marsh, twelve acres of upland, an orchard, and three shares in the Cow Common. He and his wife were assigned seats in the Meeting House; Edmund in the first row of seats at the west end of the table with the younger men; namely, Jeffrey Mingay, Anthony Stanyan, Thomas Ward, Thomas Moulton, and William Godfrey. Mary sat with the women in the second seats at the east end of the south side.

Edmund, first mentioned in Hampton in 1639, was a resident no longer than twelve years. He was about thirty-nine years old at the time of his death. The inventory of his estate was taken by Robert Page, Robert Tuck, and Jeffrey Mingay, in 1651. The amount was one hundred eleven pounds, nineteen shillings. Administration was granted to his widow, Mary, on 8 April 1651. Each of the children shared in the division of the estate at the time of Mary's second marriage to Thomas Coleman, who gave bond of eighty pounds assuring the apportionment of Edmund Johnson's property to his children, and also that they would be taught to read and write. Sons, Peter and James, received their inheritances, later married and resided in or near Hampton, both had families. Dorcas married Samuel Pearson in 1672, and they were the parents of nine children, residing in Haverhill, Massachusetts. John apparently went to Rhode Island, where he died. An agreement dated 5 October 1692, speaks of him as late of Rhode Island in a division of some land there between Edmund, (son of Peter[2]), and James[2] and his sister Dorcas.

Ancestors and Descendants of Elisha Johnson, - George D. Johnson, 1915.

Edmund Johnson, was twenty-three years old, a carpenter by trade, when in 1635 he, and wife Mary, came from Romsey to this country; sailing from London, in the ship James.

They were residents in Hampton, New Hampshire, as early as 1639, where in June, 1640, he was granted a house lot, which extended to the common way; and in September, "Bro. Crosse with five other brethren are appointed to set out unto Edm. Johnson a little ground about his house; not prejudicing the beasts going to drink at the Runne".

Besides this, was a small grant on the other side of the road, "about thirty rod, which his house stand on in the meeting house green; laying near upon a square, joyning up to a common way towards the east, otherwise the green goeth round it;" and on February 23, 1646, three shares in the cow-common.

Pioneers of Maine and New Hampshire, - Charles H. Pope, 1908.

Edmund Johnson, age twenty-three, came in the James to Boston in July 1635, settled in Hampton, proprietor, 1640 and 1646. Lawsuit, 1648. He died 1 January 1650. Inventory 4 January 1650/1, to widow Mary. She married 11 July 1651, Thomas Coleman, who secured to the children on 7 August 1653, their portions of their father's estate; to Peter, the eldest, 32 pounds; to John, 16 pounds; to James, 16 pounds; to Dorcas, 16 pounds; to be paid the sons at twenty-one years of age and the daughter at 18 or marriage. He was to pay the cost of educating the children...to read and write. (See Appendix.)

Hampton Deeds, Old Norfolk County, Massachusetts.

On 15 February 1650, John Cuddington sold to Edmund Johnson of Hampton, land and livestock, in consideration of a debt due him for the care of John Cuddington's late deceased father. (See Appendix.)

As a relationship seems to be implied, it is conceivable that Cuddington, or Coddington, could have been a family name and a possible clue to Mary Johnson's identity.

Old Norfolk County, Massachusetts, included Hampton, New Hampshire, and the books of land evidences for this town may be found in Salem, Massachusetts at the Registry of Deeds.

(See Appendix for an early Johnson line.)

PETER[2] JOHNSON, at age twenty-one, received a deed of land in Hampton, in June 1660, from his stepfather, Thomas Coleman, as the eldest son of Edmund[1]. (See Appendix.) He was a millwright by trade, and in 1672, he built a grist mill in Hampton. On 20 November 1668, Peter Johnson of Hampton, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, millwright, sold to Richard Oliver one share of the Cow Common, which had been granted by the town of Hampton to Edmund[1] Johnson in 1645. Peter, with James Philbrick, was drowned in the Hampton River on 16 November 1674. Administration of his estate was granted to his wife Ruth on 13 April 1675. Ruth Johnson joined the Hampton church on 27 February 1697/8.

JAMES[2] JOHNSON, millwright, lived in Hampton on the easterly end of his father's homestead, but he spent several years in Maine. C. T. Libby of Portland says, "He probably learned his trade of Henry Sayward, in Hampton, and removed with him to York as one of his workmen". In 1669, he is described as of York, in a grant of land to Henry Sayward, James Johnson, and Thomas Patty. A document signed by him on 23 December 1670 gives his residence again as Hampton. On 28 May 1683, James Johnson of Hampton, millwright, bought of John Shapleigh of Kittery, one-fourth of a mill on Spruce Creek. On 26 October 1699, Enoch Hutchins of Kittery, deeded property to Mr. James Johnson of the same place. On 25 June 1700, other parties deeded to the same. His death is entered on the town records of Hampton and he probably died there. He left no will, but his heirs made a division deed of the property according to his known wishes. His son Samuel received all his Kittery lands. His homestead, lands in Hampton, and his personal property went to the other children.

He was a tanner by trade, as his ancestors had been for several generations, and carried on this occupation in Winthrop in the part which became Readfield in 1791. At this time he was one of the largest taxpayers in town. His slate gravestone in East Readfield is inscribed, "He was a soldier of the Revolution", and has an S. A. R. marker placed beside it. His long will may be found in the Lincoln County Probate Records. (See Appendix.)

He served in the War of 1812, at Wiscasset, where an encampment was maintained from September 12 to 24, lest the British coming from Penobscot would attack the seacoast towns. His estate, naming him late of Readfield and appraised at the value of $2,371.40, was settled 24 February 1818. The administrators were Samuel Page and Marcy Johnson.

LEVI[7] JOHNSON, a trader, began dealing in real estate early in life. The following are some of his transactions, chiefly lands which he bought and sold in Maine.

21 July 1828, purchased 173 acres of land situated in Garland, Maine; it being Lot #7, for 665 dollars, from Samuel Sanger of Boston.
23 August 1833, acquired Lot #109 in Milo, 106 acres for 212 dollars, from Arnold F. Welles of Boston.
18 March 1844, Levi Johnson of Milo bought 80 acres of land in Appleton, Maine, from Alfred Johnson of Belfast, for 200 dollars. This land was situated on Appleton Ridge, and had been sold by Peleg and Paul Lincoln of Appleton, it being the farm they lived on, to Alfred Johnson on 10 May 1842. It was bounded on the southeast by the County Road running from Searsmont Mills to Union, west of the pond; on the southwest by the land of John Roakes; and on the northwest by land of Otis Bills and Nathan Pease; and northeast by land of Uriah Miller and James Clark, containing a set of buildings. The deed was signed by Peleg and Elizabeth Lincoln, and Paul and Irene Lincoln.

4 March 1846, Levi Johnson of Appleton sold land east of the Pettengill Stream, for 100 dollars to Phineas J. Butler.

25 January 1848, he sold two acres of land in Appleton to James Clark for 50 dollars. The last two deeds were signed by both Levi and Eliza Johnson.

22 January 1848, purchased 111 acres, more or less, of land in Milo of Bethuel and Joel Heath of Brownville, for 657 dollars.

28 August 1850, Levi Johnson, (perhaps recognizing another good investment) bought a pew in the Baptist Meeting House in Appleton, it being #36, for 25 dollars. Signed by Uriah Dyer and witnessed by Noah Sprague.

10 June 1851, purchased more land in Milo from Bethual Heath, for 200 dollars.

7 April 1852, Charles Sherburne of Milo, in consideration of 200 dollars paid by Levi Johnson of Appleton, sold land in Milo, it being the same lot purchased of said Levi Johnson, 13 January 1839, and the same that Levi Johnson purchased of George Halliburton, containing 50 acres, more or less.

24 August 1857, Levi Johnson agreed to support and maintain John and Jane Humphrey of Appleton for life, and gave a $5,000 bond for land belonging to the Humphreys.

2 April 1868, purchased 100 acres of land from Samuel B. Ripley, situated in Appleton, for 2,000 dollars.

13 September 1873, Levi Johnson, grantee, of the bond of Kendrick Meservey, sum of 500 dollars, on the condition of obligation to maintain Levi and Eliza Johnson for life.

I feel certain the above instruments do not represent all the transactions of Levi Johnson, but they serve to exemplify some of the activities of a life that surely could never have been dull. Levi and Eliza Johnson were buried in the Old Quaker Cemetery in Appleton, Maine, on the east side of Senebec Pond.

LINCOLN[8] C. JOHNSON came to Appleton from Milo, Maine, with his father when he was ten years old, in 1844. They walked the entire distance and drove the cattle, a stretch of Maine wilderness of over ninety miles. They settled on the farm on Appleton Ridge, which Lincoln's father had already purchased that year, and where his mother and sisters were awaiting their arrival.

On 10 March 1856, Lincoln then aged twenty-two, bought one-half of the farm with one-half the buildings thereon, from his father for one thousand dollars. He married in 1859, and here he reared his family of nine children, five boys and four girls. He built a new two-story colonial house in 1880. Mr. John Ulmer, a schoolteacher and a frequent visitor, remembered the good times he had there, that the guests were many, and that it was always considered a pleasant privilege to be invited to the Johnson home.

Four of the children, Alger, Uly, Net, and Winnie, married and resided in Massachusetts. The oldest son, Barzie, died in 1880. Nellie married Doctor Crooker and lived in Washington, Maine; and Zoa married Everett Spear and lived in Rockland. Lyndon bought a farm nearby; and the youngest son, Leland, married and lived on the home place for a number of years.

Although the family was widely separated, they remained close. Grandchildren were frequent summer visitors, and holidays meant a family gathering at the home place on the Ridge. Both Lincoln and Viola Johnson were buried in Pine Tree Cemetery in Appleton.

LYNDON[9] and Nellie (Mitchell) Johnson spent the first years of their married life at the Johnson home place on Appleton Ridge, where their first child, a daughter, was born. In 1897 they purchased one hundred acres of land, with buildings thereon, on the west side of Senebec Pond; and here they resided all their lives. They added to this original farm, which was adjacent to the Gilman Mitchell place, by the purchase of nearby properties from time to time. Here their three other children, all daughters, were born.

Nellie Mitchell Johnson began teaching, at age eighteen, in 1888 at the Appleton District School, Number Three, the summer term. The agent, Kimball Metcalf, reported that she was a good teacher, and the school under her instruction had been very profitable. She continued to teach in Appleton and surrounding towns for several years. In 1891 she taught on the island of Islesboro, and in 1892 on Clarks Island. During 1893-94 she attended Castine Normal School. After marriage she continued her teaching career in the local districts for a few years; and the reports were, at all times, complimentary. The "agents" continued to speak highly of her mental acuity and managerial capabilities. In 1911-12 she was appointed Superintendent of Schools in all the districts in Appleton.

Lyndon Johnson attended Rockland Commercial College, and later worked for awhile in Boston, Massachusetts. His two older brothers, Alger and Uly, were living in that state by that time, Barzie having died in 1880. After being married, Mr. Johnson decided on his occupation and settled on the farm in Appleton. He served the town as tax collector and treasurer for seven years between 1908 and 1927. He was appointed constable in 1909-10 and in 1911-12. Both he and his wife were members of the Grange, and in connection with that organization, they were continuously agents for the Patrons Androscoggin Insurance Company.

These activities of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were avocations which they thoroughly enjoyed, but their main occupation was, of course, the planning and running of the dairy farm which they maintained. They owned a large herd of prize Holstein cattle and sold the milk to the local dairy. The work was arduous, good help was difficult to hire, and having four daughters was hardly a great asset. But surely the beautiful view overlooking the Senebec must have eased their spirits and given them comfort on many occasions.

The wills of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are available in the Knox County Probate Court. Both are buried in the Pine Grove Cemetery in Appleton, Maine.

House Built By Jacob[2] Mitchell, 1666, Plymouth, Mass.

This house, built in 1666, has been completely restored and is maintained by the Pilgrim John Howland Society. It is situated in Plymouth on Sandwich Street, near the head of Water Street. Antiquarians concede that the oldest part of the house is the large room nearest the street, which contains the original huge fireplace made of brick and capable of taking a six-foot log. This earliest portion of the house was built by Jacob Mitchell before his marriage to Susanna Pope.

Before removing to Dartmouth, Jacob Mitchell sold his house to Jabez Howland, son of the Mayflower pilgrim, John Howland. Davis in "Landmarks of Plymouth", states: "Owned and occupied, as it undoubtably was, by Jabez Howland before the death of his father and mother, it is fair to presume that its floors have been trodden by those passengers of the Mayflower, and that its walls have listened to their voices. Let this ancient structure be added to the list of Pilgrim memorials, and hereafter share with the Rock our veneration and respect."

In 1680, Jabez Howland sold the house to Elkanah Watson. The following is an extract of the deed: "I Jabez Howland of Plymouth, blacksmith... for 50 pounds paid by Elkanah Watson of aforesaid town, blacksmith, (convey) all my house and land called by the name of a Garden Spott... that I bought and purchased of Jacob Mitchell... on the south side... of Giles Rickard," etc. Dated 4 January 1680. EXPERIENCE[1] MITCHELL of Leyden, Holland, arrived at Plymouth, Massachusetts, during July 1623, with the family of Francis Cooke on the Pilgrim ship, Anne. He was but fourteen years of age. It is thought that his father's name was Thomas Mitchell, "widower of Maria". Experience was allotted eight acres of land in Plymouth and shared in the first division of livestock in 1627. He married at age nineteen and lived first at Plymouth on Spring Hill. He sold his home in 1631 to Samuel Eddy and removed to Duxbury, where the land was more fertile. He lived at Bluefish River. In 1645 he was granted land at Satuckett, soon to become the town of Bridgewater. Later he received additional lands in Middleboro and Dartmouth, which he distributed among his children. A freeman in 1633, he served on the jury at the Court of Assistants and before the General Court. He was chosen "Surveyor of heighways for Duxburrow". Some time after 1680 he removed to Bridgewater with a wife, Mary, --Jane, the mother of all his children, having died, --where they made their home with his son Edward.

His will, dated 5 December 1688/9, was signed with his autograph when he was eighty years of age. It is generally conceded that Experience Mitchell, as a man and a citizen, did much toward the upbuilding of the colony of New Plymouth.

JACOB[2] MITCHELL was by trade a carpenter. It is well-authenticated that before he married he built a home for his bride situated on Sandwich Street, Plymouth. It is still standing, and is one of the most remarkable of the Pilgrim memorials. Jacob sold his house before 1673 to Jabez Howland, son of John of the Mayflower, and as the Howland family lived in it until 1680, it is now called the "Howland House". (See page 12.)

On 15 Nov. 1669, Jacob Mitchell received by deed a gift of land from his father, Experience, situated in Dartmouth, Massachusetts, the part now known as Fairhaven. Here he was at once placed in prominent positions of responsibility. He was selected as ensign bearer of the military company of Dartmouth and was chosen constable. Early in 1675, during the terrible war of King Philip, son of Massasoit, a ruthless Indian attack was made on the area. Jacob and Susanna, fearing for the lives of their three children, sent them safely to Cooke's garrison. The following day while fleeing on horseback for the same refuge, the father and mother were surprised by the savage warriors, and both were slain. Their children were taken into the home of Jacob's brother, Edward Mitchell, who educated and cared for them as their father would have done.

JACOB[3] MITCHELL, his brother Thomas, and sister Mary married three children of John and Elizabeth Kingman in a triple wedding on 1 Jan. 1696. Soon after the birth of Jacob's first child, the mother, Deliverance (Kingman) Mitchell, died; and he married a second wife, Rebecca Cushman. They lived first in Plymouth, where Jacob, whose occupation was blacksmith, was chosen surveyor of lumber, juryman, tithingman, and constable. He was influential in promoting the first school and providing suitable teachers. In 1723-4-5 he was elected selectman.

About this time plans were being formulated in Boston for the resettlement of the town of North Yarmouth, Maine, which had been destroyed during the Indian wars. In 1728, Jacob Mitchell was appointed to a subcommittee to manage the prudentials of this town. He was re-elected to this Prudential Committee in 1731-2, and with characteristic energy assumed responsibility. He sold his possessions in Plymouth--the part in which he dwelt had been made a separate township, called Kingston--and removed to that Maine wilderness on the banks of Royal's River. The new settlers drew ten acre lots for homesteads on 16 May 1727, with the stipulation that each erect a dwelling-house and clear and fence five acres of land.

Jacob Mitchell was one of the founders of the First Church of North Yarmouth and was chosen Deacon. He was selectman from the first town meeting in 1733, and re-elected every year until his death. With others, he built the first mill on the river. He had to defend the Proprietors' rights at court, when their claims were threatened, and obtained "judgements with costs"; and "thus terminated the most important suit that the town or inhabitants have ever been engaged in". In the "after divisions", as they are called on the records, Jacob Mitchell and his sons became extensive land-owners. Along with being selectman, he was usually assessor, and presided at every town meeting prior to his death. He was buried in the Old Graveyard, where a slate stone, bearing the following inscription, marks his grave.

SETH^{4} MITCHELL probably went to North Yarmouth with his father, as he drew one of the first ten acre lots, numbered sixty-two, in 1727. He purchased, as a blacksmith, for five pounds from Cornelius Soule all the islands of North Yarmouth, which included Frenches, Little Frenches, Lorings, Little Whaleboat, Winslows, Two Hummocks, Bullet, Crab, and Mitchells Islands.

He and his wife joined the First Church, and "Mr. Seth Mitchell" was voted by the town the sum of five pounds per year "for beating a drum on the hill behind the meetinghouse every Lord's day morning and noon, to notify the time of public worship". He was a constable 1740 and afterwards, and was chosen surveyor of highways. His name is on a Muster Roll, dated 9 December 1748, Boston. He served on scouting duty; and with his son, Seth, was a member of the local Train Band. In 1758, they both served in Capt. Solomon Mitchell's Foot company.

Seth Mitchell received much land by deed and gift from his father.

They joined in the building and running of the grist and saw mills. The relationship between the two seemed to be especially close.

ISAAC[1] ALLERTON is claimed to have been the first merchant of New England and the founder of the coasting trade and fishing industry. He came to Plymouth on the Mayflower with wife, Mary, and children, Bartholomew, Remember, and Mary. In 1625, he was chosen to act as the Plymouth agent in London to deal with the Merchant Adventurers; and thereafter he made many trips between England and America, transacting the Colony's business and returning with much-needed supplies. He was one of the eight Undertakers who assumed the Mayflower Planter's huge debts. Shouldering his responsibility, he carried on trade across the seas from Machias and Kennebec in Maine to every other known port on the Atlantic coast, and the debts were paid. A man of great enterprise and business acumen, he could not abide irresponsibility and quibbling. He lived for a short time at Marblehead, Massachusetts, then about 1635, went to New Amsterdam (New York), where he was made a member of the council. His latter years were spent in New Haven, Connecticut, where he was buried.

He was aged at the time of his arrival, and did not long survive. The Rev. Peter Hobart wrote in his diary, under date of 21 Aug. 1643: "Old Thomas Andrews dyed".

He was elected the first constable, first town clerk, and deputy from Hingham to the General Court for six sessions, 1636-7-8. He was chosen as assessor, and served on a committee to settle town boundaries. Later, he removed to Duxbury, where he was a juryman, surveyor of highways 1654-5, and constable in 1664. When elderly, he returned to Hingham, where his will was drawn. The inventory of his estate suggests that his occupation may have been tailoring. Mention is made of "one pair of Taylor shiers pressing Iron--one small hammer and two Button hole Cheezels". Thomas, as eldest son, inherited his father's house and lands in Hingham.

CAPTAIN THOMAS[3] ANDREWS lived on the home place in Hingham, conveyed to him by his parents in 1665. He served the town as constable in 1654 and in 1661; selectman for seven years between 1670 and 1688; and representative to the General Court in 1678. He was appointed Captain of the Hingham Train Band, and he and part of his company joined the ill-fated expedition to Canada under Sir William Phipps in 1690. The Colonial troops were repulsed with great loss of life. On turning back up the St. Lawrence River, the weather was severely cold, high winds scattered the fleet, smallpox broke out aboardship, and many died or were drowned. A few reached Boston on November 9, but almost all of the Hingham men were lost. Captain Andrews reached home, but before the month was over he, too, succumbed to the hardships he had endured.

A wife, Mary; grandsons, Stephen and Thomas; and daughters, Hannah Coombs, Bethia Winslow, and Deborah Mitchell are named in the will. According to the records, he died in Taunton at the age of ninety-eight.

JOSEPH[1] AUSTIN settled at Hampton, New Hampshire in 1642. He received a grant of land in Dover in 1648. His will made 6 June 1662, directs equal division of his property to all his children, but names Thomas only.

Re Sarah (Starbuck) Austin, (Boston Transcript, 15 Nov. 1934;#9431.

Question: Deborah Austin who married in 1668, John Coffin of Nantucket, is given as the daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Starbuck) Austin by Banks, Starbuck, Hinchman, Coffin, and Warron, in their books, and also in the Folger Manuscript. In his History of Dover, New Hampshire, John Scales makes this marriage seem impossible. Has this question ever been settled? E. F. C.

Answer: 30 Nov. 1934; #9431.

E. F. C. Sarah (Starbuck) Austin was widow of Joseph Austin, as she attested in the administration of her husband's estate 3 July 1663. She married second, 2 Mar. 1664, Humphrey Varney, whose first wife was her sister, Esther Starbuck. The Storey marriage is a mistake in the records. The widow of William Storey married Samuel Austin, brother of Joseph, and they removed from Dover, New Hampshire to Wells, Maine. William Storey died before 9 Oct. 1660; Joseph Austin died between 25 Jul. 1662 and 3 May 1663.

I have gone into this matter very thoroughly and am sure of the facts, having been misled by the incorrect record. Nantucket records and the history of the Starbuck family will substantiate these statements. M. K. D. B.

STEPHEN[1] BATCHELDER entered St. John's College, Oxford, in 1581. He took an AB degree in 1586 from Oxford, entered the Church, and was instituted a Vicar of Wherwell, Hants. He came to America, aged 71, in the "William and Francis" in 1632, after being ejected from his vicarage because of his religious views. He continued to preach whenever he had an opportunity as an Independent. He was a reformer; a descendant said "he had a real genius for opposing the majority". His career shows frequent conflicts with the authorities. With him, came his married children, Theodate, Nathaniel, Deborah, and Anne, arriving at the port of Boston.

In 1638, Rev. Batchelder attempted to form a settlement at Yarmouth on Cape Cod, but soon gave it over to others. He removed to Newbury, where his son-in-law was living. At age 79, he was the founder and father of the new settlement at Hampton, New Hampshire, where he received a grant of 300 acres, and gave a bell for the church. However, contention followed. He married his fourth wife at age 88. This marriage ended unhappily and he returned to England in 1655 and died in the 100th year of his age.

He owned a farm in that part of town, now Wayland, sixteen miles west of Boston. He was admitted freeman in 1640. A useful citizen, he served on many important civic committees for the welfare of the town. His will, 2 August 1672, and inventory are found in the Bent genealogy.

John Bent was the son of Robert and Agnes (Gosling) Bent of Penton-Grafton, Hampshire, England. His mother, Agnes Bent, left England to join her son in America in 1639, sailing on the Jonathan. Her death occurred on board ship in Boston harbor. Her body was brought ashore, and she was buried probably in Boston.

His martial career secured for him an authoritative position among the early settlers, and he officiated as assistant governor to Richard Vines. When Governor William Georges arrived in 1635/6, he organized his first court at the house of Capt. Bonython, who was chosen one of the Provincial Commissioners. In 1640 he was appointed a Councillor to Deputy Governor Thomas Georges. Capt. Bonython, an aristocrat by birth, came from an old English family. He seemed to maintain the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens during a trying period of early history.

Deposition of William[2] Burns, born 12 Nov. 1733, son of JOSEPH[1] BURNS. Deacon William Burns of Bristol testifies that he was aged 77 last autumn and that he was born in Harrington, now Bristol, near Pemaquid. His father settled at Pemaquid under Col. Dunbar just before he was born. His father was not pleased with the land drawn. Brig. Gen. Waldo encouraged him to settle at Broad Bay, and he moved there when the witness was four or five years old. He lived there until 1742 or 3. The witness' uncle, William, took a commission under the government and raised a company of militia. The witness' father removed to Scituate, and the family remained there for a few years. The father was at Louisburg and commanded a transport. After the peace in 1748, he removed to Pemaquid.

JOSEPH[1] CALDWELL was a member of the Scotch colony which settled for a time in the north of Ireland. During the conflict which ensued, when the Scotch fought for their lives and their religion, all vital records were destroyed. In 1718 many of these, so-called Scotch-Irish, families emigrated to New England to begin a new settlement. From the time of the landing until 1742, Joseph Caldwell lived in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. He was given the title of "gentleman" in the early records. On 1 December 1726, he was a petitioner for the charter of Coulrain, New Hampshire. He purchased land at Nottingham West in 1736, spending much of his time there and at Londonderry with his children. In 1747 he conveyed one-half of his dwelling house and barn with all improvements to his son, Joseph, Jr. The last record occurs on 3 June 1757, when Joseph, with wife Jeanett and son Joseph, Jr. join in conveying the homestead to their son John, fifty-two acres for two hundred pounds. Joseph, Sr. probably died soon after this date.

He was appointed naval officer for the ports of Newbury and Salisbury by the General Court in 1684; and in 1685, he was an Ensign in Capt. Daniel Peirce's company at Rowley. He was one of a committee of leading men of the town to divide the common lands among the free-holders, and forty-five acres were apportioned to him. From Clarke Genealogy -- HENRY[3] CLARKE appears to have been a wealthy and prominent citizen, for he was styled "Mr." in the records, --a title which meant something in those days. He owned much land in and around Newbury, which he appears to have sold about the time he removed to New Hampshire. In the deeds he is variously designated as gentleman, lieutenant, and cooper. He commanded a company at the Indian fight in Wells, Maine.

He was in Newbury in 1648, Salisbury 1654, and thence to Nantucket about 1662, where he was one of the original proprietors and the first magistrate. His parents were Peter and Joan (Thember) Coffin, of Brixton Parish, town of Plymouth, Devonshire, England.

In Salisbury, Tristram Coffin organized the original company of ten proprietors for the purchase and settlement of Nantucket. He negotiated a deed with the owner, Governor Thomas Mayhew of Marthas Vineyard, paying thirty pounds and two beaver hats, plus other considerations, on 2 July 1659. Once in Nantucket, Mr. Coffin continued to be a leading man among the Islanders. When policies had to be determined, enterprises concluded, or dissensions resolved, they turned to him as the one man who could administer justice with impartiality.

COOKE

FRANCIS[1] COOKE, wife Hester Mahieu

Hester, b. ; m. Richard Wright.
Mary, b. bef. 1627; m. John Tompson.

FRANCIS[1] COOKE resided in Leyden, Holland, long before the other Pilgrims. At the time of his marriage in Leyden he was called "woolcomber, bachelor, from England". His first four children were born in Holland. In July 1620, he with his older son, John, embarked on the Speedwell at Delfs-haven for England. At Plymouth, England, they transferred to the Mayflower and set sail for New England on September 6. Three years later in July 1623, Hester Cooke with children, Jane, Jacob, and Hester, arrived in Plymouth, Massachusetts on the ship, Anne, to join the other members of their family.

Francis Cooke received several early grants of land in Plymouth and surrounding areas. His frequent service on the grand inquest and trial juries and as a surveyor of highways clearly attests that he was a man of sound judgment and had the respect and confidence of his fellowmen. He lived a long life--Bradford wrote, "Francis Cooke is still living, a very old man, and hath seene his children's children have children". His will is dated 7 October 1659 and was presented at court on 5 June 1663. His wife, Hester, survived him.

ROBERT[1] CUSHMAN was the son of Thomas Cushman, husbandman, of the Parish of Rolvenden, Kent, and his wife, Elinor Hubbard. His occupation was "grosser" in Canterbury, a trade dealing with woolens and cloth. On 4 November 1611 his name first appeared on the Leyden registers in company with the Pilgrims. He was chosen as their representative in London to make application to the Virginia Company for liberty to settle in North America. This was in September 1617.

After much dissension, many delays and disappointments, the Speedwell joined the Mayflower at Southampton for the long voyage across the Atlantic. Various distresses caused the Speedwell to put back first to Dartmouth, then Plymouth, where it was judged unfit to proceed. "Mr. Cushman and family, whose hart and courage was gone from them before" desired to be among those left behind. Yet he continued to represent the Plymouth Plantation in negotiations with the Merchant Adventurers. Bradford wrote of his relationship with the Pilgrims, he "was as their right hand with their friends and adventurers, and for diverce years had done and agitated all their business with them to ther great advantage". To show nice recognition and appreciation for his services, the Pilgrim planters, when the early lots were cast in 1623, reserved the first one-acre lot for Robert Cushman with the hope that he might soon join them.

In 1621, he visited the Plymouth Colony with his young son, Thomas, to transact some business for the Adventurers. He returned as he had planned to do, leaving his son in Plymouth to be reared and well cared for by William Bradford.

THOMAS[2] CUSHMAN, age fourteen, came with his father, Robert, to Plymouth on the ship Fortune in 1621. When his father returned to England, he left Thomas in the care of Governor William Bradford, who gave him a home, educated him, and treated him as a son. No doubt he was tutored by Elder William Brewster, a well-educated man. Thomas Cushman succeeded Brewster as Ruling Elder of the Plymouth church in 1649, a position he held for forty-five years until his death. He served in various town offices, and was an extremely useful gentleman. His wife, Mary Allerton, came over on the Mayflower. She was the last survivor of this famed ship. Both are buried in graves on Burial Hill in Plymouth.

REV. ISAAC[3] CUSHMAN lived in that part of Plymouth which was set off 4 June 1707, as Plympton. He took the freeman's oath in 1683 and served his town in many capacities. He was chosen surveyor of lands and highways; selectman, 1687-8, 1692-4; assessor, 1685; juryman many times; agent to defend the town rights and boundaries; and deputy to represent the town at the General Court, 1689-90-91. He was ordained as minister of the Western Precinct, later Plympton, on 27 October 1698. As pastor, he was greatly beloved and seemed to possess particular "gifts and graces" for the ministry, in which he served for thirty-seven years until his death. Both he and his wife, Rebecca, are buried in the Old Burying-Ground at Plympton.

He is next heard of on 29 March 1651/2, when he was chosen corporal of the military company on Marthas Vineyard. While in Watertown he had become acquainted with Thomas Mayhew, and had purchased from him a grant of land on the Island. He was assistant to the chief magistrate to manage the business of the island for three years. He had land difficulties with Governor Mayhew, but his legal right of possession was maintained. After 1665 he removed to Plymouth, and remarried there in his old age Mrs. Bathsheba Pratt on 29 August 1667, probably the widow of Joshua Pratt. Here John Daggett died in the late spring of 1673.

J. HENRY[1] DEMUTH, the founder of the Demuth family at Broad Bay, was of French Huguenot descent. He landed at Boston on 9 November 1751, coming from Bir Kenbauel in the Principality of Hachenberg. Apparently a brother, George Henry, of Wiesenbachen in the same province, came with him to Boston. Both signed the Crell broadcast in Boston, 17 December 1751; but there is no evidence that George migrated from Boston to Broad Bay. John Henry was a signer of the Shirley petition of 1754. (See Appendix.) His farm seems to have included the homestead lot now occupied by Henry Hilton, plus some adjacent territory. He was killed by Indians on Storer's Point in the French and Indian War, while endeavoring to protect his property. (For a brief account of the suffering and privations of these early Germans of Broad Bay, see the Ulmer family.)

GEORGE[2] DEMUTH came to this country with his father when a young boy. At Broad Bay he was assigned Lot #17 at an early date. He was a member of the Massachusetts militia, and served in the Revolutionary War as a 1st Lieutenant in Andrew Schenk's company, Colonel Mason Wheaton's regiment, service limited to local expeditions. He was one of three men to inventory the estate of Jacob Lash in 1777. He also witnessed the will of Prudence Chapman on 17 November 1778. When Waldoboro voted to build a bridge across the Medomak River in 1785, George Demuth was appointed "to view the bridge and see same is well made". The census of 1790 lists George and Henry Demuth as heads of families in that year. For eight years between 1793 and 1807, George Demuth served the town of Waldoboro as selectman.

Obadiah, b. a 1645; m. Bennett.

SAMUEL[2] EDDY came to New England with his brother, John Eddy, on the Handmaid, leaving the port of London 10 August 1630, and arriving at Plymouth Harbor on 29 October 1630. Here, he purchased a house with land on Spring Street from Experience Mitchell on 9 May 1631. He took the freeman's oath on 1 January 1632/3. His trade was tailor, which he taught to an apprentice. In 1662 he became one "of twenty-six" in a purchase of land which comprised the greater part of the present town of Middleboro. The part assigned to Mr. Eddy was deeded to his children. He and his wife lived in Swansea, Massachusetts, during their later years, perhaps to be near their sons, Caleb and Obadiah, who resided there.

Benjamin, b. a 1685; m. Hannah. He died age 24.
Abigail, b. Sept. 1687; m. Thomas Trapp (Thomas), 18 Jan. 1716/7.

JOHN[3] EDDY, having learned the trade of blacksmith, was asked to go to Marthas Vineyard in that capacity. He complied with this request, leaving Plymouth in 1660, and took up a grant of land in Edgartown. In 1662, he was chosen constable and became a member of the train band. In a division of land in 1663, he received twenty-five shares in Tisbury, and henceforth was identified with this town until the close of his life. Again he was made constable, elected selectman for six years, tithingman in 1699, and appointed to various committees. His last public office was surveyor of highways in 1711, then in his 73rd year.

After his father's death, John Eddy of Tisbury entered into an agreement with his brothers regarding lands Samuel had left. This is important because two deeds give absolute proof that John Eddy of Tisbury was a son of Samuel Eddy of Plymouth. His will of 24 Dec. 1714 mentions wife Hepsibah, daughters Hannah Manter, Beulah Coffin, and Abigail Eddy.

ROBERT[1] ELWELL, probably from county Dorset, England, was in Dorchester, Massachusetts in 1634, where he received four small grants of land. In 1639 he removed to Marblehead, then a part of Salem. There he was made constable in 1640, and a member of the Salem church in 1643. By about 1646, he resided in Gloucester with the occupation of fisherman. Here he was elected selectman, 1649; a local justice in 1651; and town constable, 1657. His will was proved on 26 June 1683. As was the custom in early colonial days, his eldest son, Samuel, received the principal portion of property, including house and barns in Gloucester, land, cattle, and farming equipment. It was to be his duty to care for his mother and father as long as they lived. Son John received three acres at "little Good harbour"; Isaac, his cloak; Joseph, a yearling steer; and Thomas, land and a yearling.

JOSEPH[2] GRAVES, a blacksmith from Charlestown, was a proprietor in the new town of Sudbury, 22 November 1675. He was offered timber for a house and shop with land needful as an inducement. He was one of the men who offered to "travel with horse and weekly to fetch and carry preachers to supply Sudbury at least every Lord's day with ministers".

In the early settlement of new towns it was necessary that a man knowing the trade of smithing be a resident, not only for the shoeing of horses, but also for his ability to work with iron. Many tools and implements for rural living were fashioned in the blacksmith's shop. This occupation was essential to the well-being of the community.

From Dow's History of Hampton --

HENRY[1] GREEN, Councillor, Judge, was of Hampton a few years after the first settlement of the town. He was a millwright by trade and a mill owner; but he was also a prominent man in the town and province. He was twice chosen a commissioner to settle the Salisbury line; was selectman, two years; assistant of the Inferior Court; a justice of the Court of Sessions; councillor from 1685-1689, and again from 1692-1698; and Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, 1697-8. At the council board and on the bench, his influence was very great, while his sterling character won the respect of the people, so that important trusts were consigned to his hands. His death is thus chronicled on the town records of Hampton:

"Henry Green Esq. Aged Abou 80 years for Seuerall years a member of the Counsill until by age he layd downe that place but A Justice till he died which was the 5 August, 1700."

WILLIAM[1] HODGKINS, the ancestor of the Ipswich family, came to that town about 1640. He spent some time in Gloucester, Massachusetts, but returned to Ipswich where he died in the seventy-second year of his age. In 1668, he built his house. He was chosen one of nine men, in February 1676, to see that the town orders were observed. He gave the selectmen of the town a signed document assuring them that his son-in-law, Robert Cotes and his family, would not be burdensome to the town. Sponsorship settlement in a new town was a quaint early custom, which was required. In 1687, William Hodgkins, with Jacob and Matthew Perkins, built twenty feet of wharf at the Cove. At age sixty-nine, in 1691, he deposed, testifying to the use of Long Beach for fifty years or more.

On this passage, he was almost drowned in mid-Atlantic when he fell overboard during a violent storm. Fortunately, he managed to grasp a trailing halyard and haul himself to the surface where he was then rescued. He was the thirteenth signer of the Compact, and was included with the Governor Carver family. He was a member of the Governor's Council and was frequently a representative to the General Court. He commanded the Pilgrims' Trading Post at Kennebec, Maine. "-- he proved a useful Instrument of good in his place and was the last man that was left of those who came over in the shipp Called the Mayflower." - Bradford.

History of Hampton, N. H., - Dow.

The parents of CAPTAIN CHRISTOPHER HUSSEY were probably John Hussey, of Dorking, England, who married, 5 December 1593, Mary Wood. They seem to have been of good standing in society. Captain Hussey was the first deacon of the church in Hampton, a captain of the militia, and a magistrate; town-clerk, selectman, and representative. His career was honorable and distinguished.

He was one of the early proprietors of the island of Nantucket, "now resident in Hampton". He deeded all his lands and rights in this island to his sons, Stephen and John, on 23 October 1671 and on 6 December 1681. His will, dated 28 February 1684 and proved on 7 August 1686, names his children.

JOHN[1] HUTCHINS was one of the ninety-one original proprietors of Newbury. His lot, laid out 11 January 1644, was number thirty-four. As a freeholder, he was entitled to have proportionable rights in all waste lands, commons, rivers, etc. The date of his marriage and the maiden name of his wife or her parentage are not recorded. Under the date of 1653, "the wife of John Hutchins was presented to court this year for wearing a silk hood, but on testimony of her being brought up above the ordinary way was discharged".

About 1650 John Hutchins removed his family to Haverhill, and located on the banks of the Merrimack River. Here he reared his children and lived for the rest of his life. On 6 March 1657, he was granted liberty to set a "wear" in the Merrimack with the privilege of curing his fish upon the island, and the right to sell his fish to the towns-people. He was remitted, as "late Constable", several pounds of corn which he had collected for taxes and which had been consumed by fire when in his possession. There is a record of the death of his Indian servant named Hopewell in 1668. In 1673 he, having built galleries in the meeting-house, was "allowed to sell seats or privileges to the same to anyone .....". His will was executed 24 June 1674 and probated on 11 February 1685.

He was with the Pilgrims in Leyden and was married there. His occupation was "brewer's man", and he was one of the few to be early styled "gentleman". A freeman in Plymouth in 1633, he paid the third largest tax in the town. He was one of a group of seven men chosen to lay out the highways and to select the locations for two meeting-houses. He was made Deacon of the church. John Jenney was Governor's Assistant for seven years, and was authorized to grant lands in Plymouth. In 1641-2, he was Deputy to the General Court. He erected and ran a grist mill, and took an active part in the trade and maritime interests of the colonists. His will, dated 28 December 1643, and that of his wife in 1654, testify to the position and wealth of the Jenney family.

Joshua Lane Memorial, - James P. Lane, 1835.

"Joshua Lane united with the church in Hampton, with his wife, 10 March 1718. At this time he signed an "Act of Consecration", which breathed the spirit of that earnest piety which was characteristic of him in all his subsequent life. Not long after uniting with the church he was chosen Deacon and held the office till death. In every relation of life his character was eminent for christian virtue. He was highly esteemed in the community and exerted a wide and salutary influence. He was specially happy in his family. His wife was a fit companion and help-meet, heartily and wisely aiding him in the training of their children to habits of industry and piety. His death was a sudden and unexpected event. A heavy thunderstorm had nearly passed over, when, on stepping to the front door of the house, he was instantly killed by lightning. This was about six o'clock in the afternoon, 14 June 1766. His wife had died 13 April 1765."

On the same date, the following was recorded: Joshua Lincoln and Anna his wife, of Appleton Ridge, Lincoln County, yeoman, in consideration of the services done by him, and the love, good will, and affection which I do bear to my loving son, Peleg Lincoln, of the same plantation and county, yeoman, do give, grant, and sell to him one-half the front lot of #10 which I now live upon, with one-half the buildings now standing thereon, containing one hundred and five acres, to his proper use and benefit, free and clear from me or my heirs.

In 1830, Appleton voted to build a circular pound on Peleg Lincoln's ledge, forty feet in diameter, with good "gait" and capstone, and provided with a sufficient lock. Peleg Lincoln was usually keeper of this pound. The foundation of the pound can still be seen.

He was ensign of the Newbury Company that went with Sir William Phips against Quebec, and was drowned with nine others off Anticosta in 1690 in a violent storm on their return. The following is an extract from the report by William Phips of the expedition against Quebec: "I set saile from New England, March 1690, with seaven hundred men and seaven saile of ships, and we reduced Arcaddy. With 2300 men and with 30 saile of ships, I sailed August 10, 1690, for Quebeck. Contrary winds delayed our arrival till October. I brought the ships within Musquett shot, we fired and dismounted severall of their best cannon, so that the city must have been taken in two or three daies but small pox and the feavour broke out, and the weather grew so extream cold that no further progress could be made therein, so I returned to New England. Letters by John Scales, - (Dover, N. H., Hist. Soc.)

"Judge Jonathan[3] Longfellow, with son Jacob, removed from Hampton Falls to Nottingham, New Hampshire, the part that later became Deerfield. There he built a Garrison house. He bought and sold much land, as is evidenced by many land deeds; and it is said that he also owned and sometimes sold slaves. In 1761, he removed to Rye, New Hampshire, and three years later to Cornwallis, Nova Scotia. The following year he went to Machias, Maine. In 1766, he built a house there, which was afterwards his homestead and a tavern. He was appointed the first Justice of the Peace east of the Penobscot River, and was a useful, honored citizen."

JACOB[4] and Mercy (Page) Longfellow

There are no New Hampshire vital records listing the children of Jacob and Mercy (Page) Longfellow. However, land evidences and printed family records seem to furnish conclusive data regarding this Longfellow family of Deerfield and Newmarket, New Hampshire. The following is offered.

JACOB[4] LONGFELLOW, son of Jonathan[3], was born 6 November 1737, in Hampton Falls, New Hampshire.[1.] He removed with his father, Jonathan, after 1741, to Nottingham, New Hampshire, when the latter, following the division of his mother's property, settled there.[2.] Deerfield, a part of Nottingham, was separated in 1766. It was in this section that Jonathan Longfellow built a garrison house and there resided.

Jacob was a soldier, as was his father, engaged in fighting the Indians; and when a young man, he became a Captain in the town Militia.[3.] He bought land in Deerfield from his father on 6 February 1759.[4.] He married, 3 April 1760, Mercy Page in Kensington, New Hampshire.[5.] He purchased more land in Deerfield in 1760 and 1762.[6.] He was moderator at the first town meeting, 17 March 1767; helped to build the first church and to hire the minister; and was selectman several times.[7.] His principal occupation was surveyor of timber lands and lots in Deerfield, and the laying out of highways in the new town.

Jonathan Longfellow left New Hampshire to go to Nova Scotia and Machias, Maine, in 1765. The records state that his married children, Mary Batchelder, Jacob Longfellow, and Sarah Cilley remained in New Hampshire.[8.]

In 1774, Jacob sold property in Deerfield, with Mercy, his wife, relinquishing her right of dower and power of thirds. [9] He may have lived for a while in Kensington, New Hampshire, as he and his wife owned property there. Betty, a daughter of Jacob Longfellow, was baptized in the Congregational Church, 30 June 1776, in Kensington. [10] During this year, Jacob signed the Association Test in Deerfield. [11] When Jonathan Longfellow made his will in Machias, Maine, dated 11 November 1775, he mentions "my well beloved son, Jacob". [12]

In 1777, Jacob was of Newmarket, New Hampshire, when he bought and sold more land. [13] Apparently he and his wife were proprietors of the tavern there. His death must have occurred about this time. His tax in Deerfield was abated and the rates taken off for the remainder of the year. [14] It is possible he was engaged in military activities.

On 17 December 1781, the selectmen of Newmarket adjourned for refreshment at the tavern of Widow Longfellow. [15] Polly Longfellow and William White, both of Newmarket, were married 5 October in 1784, [16] and apparently helped run the tavern.

In 1783, Mercy Longfellow, widow and spinster of Newmarket, bought buildings and land from Thomas Perkins. [17] It is possible that Mercy (Page) Longfellow was dead by 1784, for in that year, the selectmen of Newmarket were indebted one pound for "vittles and drink" to William and Mary White for expenses incurred at the tavern. [18]

In 1791, a Jonathan Longfellow of Newmarket bought property of William and Mary White. [19] In 1795 and 1797, he was approbated as innholder in Newmarket. [20] Jonathan Longfellow married Eunice Hill, daughter of Gen. James Hill of Newfields, [21] New Hampshire, a town adjacent to Newmarket. In Stratham, another adjacent town, a Mercy Longfellow joined the church in 1791. [22]

Jonathan and Eunice Longfellow bought a houselot and wharf in Hallowell, Maine, on 26 July 1798. The deed stated that Jonathan Longfellow was from Newmarket, New Hampshire, Rockingham County.[23] He and his wife removed to Hallowell. In 1803, he sold his Newmarket property to Francis Durgin, and took a mortgage on same- "seven acres with buildings thereon, the same that Jonathan Longfellow and Mary White conveyed by their deed dated 10 June 1803".[24] At this time, Jonathan was living in Hallowell, Maine. From the vital records of Hallowell, Maine:

A child of Jonathan Longfellow, died February 1803.

A child of Jonathan Longfellow, died December 1807, age 2. Jonathan died in Gardiner, Maine, 6 April 1812. Robert Page, a brother of Mercy (Page) Longfellow, was administrator of his estate 11 December 1814.[25] Notes of Joshua and of Levi Johnson were mentioned in the settlement. The widow Eunice married second, 25 December 1816/7, David Smiley of Gardiner, Maine,[26] son of Hugh and Mary Smiley of Windham, Maine, whose first wife was Frances Lovejoy. Eunice (Hill) (Longfellow) Smiley died in Bangor, Maine, 4 May 1840, age 71.[27]

Two brothers of Mercy (Page) Longfellow, Simon and Robert Page, settled in Winthrop, Maine, in 1783.[28] About 1785, the family of Joseph Johnson, of Brentwood, New Hampshire, settled in Readfield, Maine, then a part of Winthrop. Two Johnson sons married Longfellow girls. Joshua Johnson married Elizabeth Longfellow in 1790; and Levi Johnson married Mercy Longfellow,[29] 19 September 1793, both of Readfield. Elizabeth (Longfellow) Johnson lived and died in Vienna, Maine. The vital records give this account: Elizabeth Longfellow, wife of Joshua Johnson, was born in Deerfield, New Hampshire, 15 October 1763. She died 2 January 1838, in Vienna, Maine.[30] Listed among her eight children was a son, Jacob, and a daughter, Mercy. Levi and Mercy (Longfellow) Johnson also had a daughter, Mercy. Levi died in 1814, and Mercy died 18 March 1850, age 80, in Brownville, Maine.[31]

The Hallowell Vital Records give this record--Abigail Longfellow and Sylvester Roulstone, married 24 October 1808, both of Newmarket, New Hampshire.

It seems quite probable that Elizabeth, Mercy, and Abigail were sisters of Jonathan Longfellow of Newmarket and Hallowell; and after the deaths of their parents in Newmarket, they came to the vicinity of Winthrop, Maine, perhaps to live near or with the families of their uncles, Simon and Robert Page. Another sister, Mary (Longfellow)

The Low genealogy does not give positive proof of the paternal origin of THOMAS[1] LOW of Ipswich, Massachusetts, but fairly extensive research in English parish registers appears to provide significant data. The author believes that Thomas Low came to America in connection with the immigration of Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, who sailed from Gravesend, England, 1 June 1636, and arrived in Massachusetts Bay in the following November. He believes that Susanna, mentioned in the will of 1677, was a second wife. Essex County depositions suggest the ages of the father and his children.

JOHN[1] MCLAUGHLIN, and wife Mary, of Scotch ancestry emigrated from northern Ireland to Massachusetts before 1730. They went first to Londonderry, New Hampshire, and from there to the early settlement in Bedford. His name, as well as that of his son John, is on the petition for incorporation, 10 May 1750. He served as the first town clerk of Bedford in 1750 and 1751. The names of John and Mary McLaughlin are on a deed dated 22 October 1730, for the sale of land in Londonderry, where both were residents at that time. (See Appendix for the will of Mary McLaughlin.)

THOMAS[2] MCLAUGHLIN served as an Ensign in Canada in 1754 from Bedford, New Hampshire. His first three children were born in that town. In 1774, he removed to Francestown, where the births of three more children are recorded. At the town meeting, 18 March 1776, "John Dickey, James Fisher, and Thomas McLaughlin, three sturdy Scotchmen, were appointed a Committee of Safety or Inspection". He was selectman in 1776 and 1781. He continued his military service in the Revolutionary War, as a Lieutenant at Bunker Hill and as a Captain thereafter until he was honorably discharged.

About 1784, Captain McLaughlin became associated with the Cape Ann Association, a group of men who wished to take up land grants in the Passamaquoddy region along the St. Croix River in New Brunswick, Canada. Shortly after, he removed his family to this area, probably attracted by the wealth of the forest and the fertility of the soil, and perhaps for the sake of living under a settled government. The McLaughlin family drew land lots at several different times, and when new grants were made in 1797 and 1810 in Charlotte county, the names of Thomas, Sr., Thomas, Jr., John, Joseph, James, Laughlin, Robert, and Zachariah are found. These lands are located in the vicinity of Tower Hill, St. David's Parish, near St. Stephens.

It is possible that other children, in addition to those listed above, were born to Thomas and Margaret McLaughlin at Tower Hill. The family was composed of sturdy pioneers who knew how to wrest a livelihood from the forests and streams. They could build their own houses and mills, till the land to produce their foodstuff, raise sheep and cattle, and spin the yarn and weave the cloth for their clothing. In other words, they were completely independent and self-sufficient.

Thomas McLaughlin, Sr. removed from New Brunswick to Maine, where he had relatives living in the town of Madison. A married nephew, James McLaughlin, with his wife and family resided there. In a deposition Captain McLaughlin made on 21 April 1818, he states that his age is eighty-five years and that he was born in Londonderry, New Hampshire. He died in Madison, Maine, in the year of 1820. (See pension application of Thomas McLaughlin in Appendix.)

The following year he removed to Braintree, where he and another were granted eight acres of land. He brought with him a wife Sarah and a son. The wife Sarah died there on 3 December 1638. John[1] Marchant, Sr. was next in Watertown in 1642 and 1645. From here, he removed to Yarmouth before 1648; the year he was chosen constable for the town. He probably died prior to 1670, when his son John[2] was promoted from Ensign to Lieutenant and is called "Senior". John[2] Marchant continued to reside in Yarmouth and was there in 1679. His wife's name is unknown, but his children are recorded there. He received a grant of land in Edgartown, Marthas Vineyard, in 1682, and probably went there to live. The date of his death is unknown but seems to be some time before 1693.

He built a successful mill at this time for his employer, and was chosen in 1636 to be Representative to the General Court, a position he occupied until he removed to the Vineyard. About 1639, he removed to Watertown where, although active in civil affairs, he suffered financial reverses. He built the first bridge across the Charles River in 1641. About this time, he acquired the islands of Nantucket and Marthas Vineyard, but continued to remain in Massachusetts for four more years. The first documented record of his residence on the Island is 23 November 1647. His government of the Vineyard is fully documented in Charles E. Banks' two volume "History of Marthas Vineyard", published in 1911.

THOMAS[1] MILLETT, fourth son of Henry Millett, gentleman, of Chertsey and London, came to America in the Elizabeth in 1635 with his wife and son Thomas. He settled first in Dorchester, Massachusetts, where he shared in land divisions. With his father-in-law, John Greenaway, and other Dorchester inhabitants, he signed a petition seeking that no more Anabaptists be permitted to join the Colony. He removed to Gloucester and there became a Teaching Elder of the First Church. In 1655, he sold his house and land and took up residence in Brookfield. Administration of his estate was granted to his wife Mary, 26 September 1676.

According to Nathaniel G. Marshall's notes, EBENEZER[6] MOODY married a Banks and lived in York, Maine. His last four children are named in the Marshall manuscript. The Bragdon Diary gave the death records of Ebenezer and his wife, but does not give her first name. A clue to the identity of this wife may be found in the Bangor Historical Magazine, Volume 7, page 26, in a write-up about Aaron Banks, Jr., of York and Castine, Maine. Here it is stated that Aaron, Jr. had a sister married to a Littlefield, and another married to a Moody. (Peter Littlefield, Jr. married Esther Banks, 16 December 1761, of York, Maine.) This reference further states that descendants of these sisters may be found in Waldo County, Maine. Ebenezer's son, William Moody, resided in Lincolnville, Maine, which is located in this county. (See William[1] Pearce family.)

Ebenezer[6] Moody and his brother, William, were in the York militia with men from the southwest side in 1757.

William Moody's will dated 23 November 1839 made adequate provision for his wife, Patience, leaving the homestead farm to his son James, which he has previously received. The rest of his property, including his one-eighth interest in the schooners, the Dorcas of Camden and the Margaret Maria of Lincolnville, was divided among his remaining children and the heirs of Robert and Ebenezer, with the provision that his son James was to care for his mother. Grandson William Moody, son of his deceased son Robert, was to be given one hundred and fifty dollars because of his industrious habits.

THOMAS[1] NICHOLS, of Amesbury as early as 1665, had a meeting house seat and was made "townsman" in 1667. He owned land there, 1670; took the oath of allegiance, 1677; and was a member of the Train Band, 1680. Mary[2] Nichols, who married Jonathan Stanwood and lived in Gloucester, was from West Amesbury, known as Jamaica at that time. This Thomas Nichols family appears to have been the only one of the name in that area at this early date. Hoyt suggests the above list may be incomplete.

In Weymouth, he shared in the division of land in 1651, and held the office of constable in 1657. Two years later, he was recorded in Edgartown, Marthas Vineyard, where he was granted a lot of forty acres of land and the right to Ox Pond for his trade, evidently tanning. DEACON ROBERT[1] PAGE, the first of the name in Hampton, was a son of Robert and Margaret Page, of Ormsby, in the county of Norfolk, England. His wife's name was Lucy. The record of their examination on 11 April 1637, preparatory to leaving England, gave his age as thirty-three years, and hers as thirty years. They, with three children, "Francis, Margarett and Susanna, and two servants, William Moulton aged twenty years and Anne Wadd, fifteen years, were desirors to passe into New England to inhabitt". They settled in Hampton in 1639.

Goodman Page was one of the selectmen for six years. He represented the town in the General Court of Massachusetts, two years; he was at one time marshal of the old county of Norfolk. He was also a member of various committees raised by the town from time to time. In 1660, he was one of the deacons of the church, and from the death of his colleague in 1671 to his own death, he appears to have been the only deacon.

JOHN[2] PUTNAM was made freeman in 1665. He was constantly to the fore in all matters relating to town or church government. In 1668-70, he signed a petition requesting that a minister be allowed to conduct services at the "Farms". He was among the heaviest taxpayers in Salem Village. It was in the military affairs and the witchcraft delusion that his character was best shown. In 1672, he was styled corporal; in 1678, he was commissioned lieutenant of a troop of horse; after 1687, he was called Captain. He was frequently a deputy to the General Court.

His wife, Rebecca Prince, was a stepdaughter of John Gedney of Salem.

CAPTAIN MATTHIAS[1] REMILLY, as the name was frequently spelled, was the immigrant ancestor of this family at Broad Bay (Waldoboro), having come to this country as early as 1742. He was assigned Lot #18, which was adjacent to the one owned by George Demuth. These lots still show the original bounds by the stone walls which still stand on those portions of the early farms east of the Friendship road. He had had military experience in Germany; and at Broad Bay, as Captain, he became the first regular commissioned officer of the militia. Thus he assumed a position of importance during the Indian Wars. The Journal which he kept is available in the Massachusetts State Archives. Many references mention Captain Remilly as a leading man in the settlement. By 1797, he was living at East Thomaston (Rockland), where he had removed to join his old friend, Captain John Ulmer.

EDWARD[1] STARBUCK received a land grant of forty acres in Dover, New Hampshire. He was a Representative to the General Court in 1643 and 1646. He early became an Elder of the church, and was greatly respected by his fellow citizens. About 1648, he disagreed with some of the precepts of the church; however, for several years, he maintained his clerical position without much disquietude. In 1659, he met John Macy and joined him, together with two youths, James Coffin and Isaac Coleman, on a trip to Nantucket. Deciding to settle on the Island, he returned in the spring of 1661 to Dover for his family. In Nantucket, Elder Starbuck became a leading and valued citizen of that new settlement.

ROBERT[1] STETSON is first mentioned in the Scituate records in 1634. He was the earliest settler in the southern part of the town, now known as Norwell, and built the first mill there. When a "troop of horse" was ordered raised by the Colony Court, he was commissioned Cornet, an office he continued to hold for twenty years. He represented Scituate at the Plymouth Colony Court for seventeen years; and at the first town meeting in 1666, he was chosen first selectman. He continued to be active in town and military affairs until he was well over sixty years of age. In 1665, he received a grant of two hundred acres of land from the Colony for his services in settling the difficulties with the Indians at the "Kennebeck Plantation". Cornet Stetson owned much land in Scituate; he had a flourishing mill on Herring Brook; and he was much in demand everywhere. "In those trying days the fate of this entire section of Plymouth County was literally in his hands." He died at the age of ninety years, -- "having lived long and left a good name".

CAPTAIN BENJAMIN[2] STETSON served the town of Scituate as constable in 1668 and 1685; assessor, 1684; juryman, 1685; and Deputy to the General Court in Plymouth in 1691. After Plymouth Colony united with the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1691, Mr. Benjamin Stetson was a representative to the General Court in Boston, in 1693; and again in 1700, when he is called Captain Benjamin Stetson. He was commissioned Captain of the Scituate militia about 1695. He was prominent in church, as well as in civil and military affairs, and served on many important committees. The inventory of his estate, taken 1 June 1711, shows that he was an educated, well-to-do citizen, whose occupation was probably carpenter. The estate division, 27 June 1715, gave to widow Bethia her thirds. Benjamin, as eldest son, received a double portion. Sons, Samuel and James, and daughters, Bethia Andrews, Hannah Tileston, Deborah Fisher, Eunice James, and Mary Partridge are named.

The old Stetson homestead remained in Joseph's branch of the family until it was purchased and restored by the Stetson Kindred of America, Inc.

Berwick, originally the northern part of Kittery known as the parish of Unity, became a separate township in 1713, by order of the General Court. The southern boundary of the new town was Thompson's Brook. This stream took its name from Miles[1] Thompson, to whom, in 1656, was granted the first lot above it. THOMAS[2], the only surviving son of his father Miles, dwelt here, as did his son, Thomas, Jr., until the latter removed to Bristol, Maine, about 1756. This section, which included the beautiful Salmon Falls River, was separated from the parent town in 1814, and was called South Berwick.

He was in Salem as early as 1632, and built his house in the part of town known as "the Cove", now in Beverly. Here he resided until his departure for England in 1668. His high standing in the community is attested to by his service in civic activities. He served as Grand Juror in 1653-4; signed the petition to the General Court in 1659 for the establishment of Beverly as a separate town from Salem; witnessed wills and appraised estates from time to time. He made his will on 29 July 1668, in contemplation of his return to England. In it he made especial provision for his eldest daughter, Anne, who became mentally disturbed as a result of a cruel beating at the hands of one Job Swinnerton, Sr. Alice and Martha, his two youngest daughters, accompanied him to London. Not long after his arrival there, he died and was buried in the East Cloister of Westminster Abbey, where his younger brother, Herbert Thorndike, was Prebendary.

He was chosen selectman at the first town meeting in Beverly in 1668, and was re-elected in 1671-73-75. He was surveyor of highways in 1674, and served on various land committees. He was chairman of the committee to settle the bounds between Beverly and Manchester, Massachusetts, in 1694. Active in military affairs, he was commissioned Captain in 1689. He took the freeman's oath, 30 December 1679. As principal heir of his father, he inherited a large landed estate, which he increased substantially. In the summer of 1768, ROBERT[5] THORNDIKE of Cape Elizabeth, with his wife Deborah and seven children, settled at Goose River, now Rockport Village, Maine. He had been there previously to cut timber. For several years he had brought his sloop to Goose River and carried away cargoes of ash to be used in making vessel blocks. Being pleased with the bountiful natural resources, he decided to make his homesite there. He purchased fifty acres of land, extending from the eastern shore of Rockport Harbor eastward to Lily Pond, from the Twenty Associates. He built a rough-timbered house on the small hill overlooking the Harbor, and there he reared his family of twelve children. Thus, he became the first settler of Rockport, Maine.

Mr. Thorndike, possessing the qualities of a sturdy pioneer, was a man of many occupations. He was a sea captain, fisherman, farmer, woodsman, carpenter, hunter, and soldier; and in all these activities he gave a manly account of himself. His knowledge of every inlet and cove on the Maine coast served him in good stead on many occasions. An incident that took place during the stormy days of the Revolution is a good example of his ability.

Captain Samuel Tucker of Marblehead, commanding an American privateer, had captured a British merchantman off Blue Hill. The captain was shaping his course down the Bay, hotly pursued by the infamous Captain Mowatt of His Majesty's Royal Navy, when he came across Thorndike fishing off the Ledges. Captain Tucker impressed Thorndike, forcing him to pilot his prize out of the Bay. The chase narrowing and the weather forbidding, Tucker slipped into a shallow cove near Harpswell. Mowatt, unacquainted with those waters and realizing the advantage was his, waited outside. Robert Thorndike, knowing well the inlet, offered to take Tucker out under the cover of darkness. After waiting three nights for a foggy nor'easter, Tucker, and his prize, with Captain Thorndike at the helm, slipped past Mowatt and sailed out to sea, eventually arriving safely at Salem Harbor.

Mr. Ruel Robinson, citing chronological events in Camden and Rockport in his history of the towns, states, "This year on December 10, 1834, died that wonderful and venerable man, Robert Thorndike, the first settler of Rockport, at the age of one hundred four years".

Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War. Vol. 15, p. 689.

JOHN[1] TILLEY, with his wife and daughter, Elizabeth, came over on the Mayflower in 1620. He was the sixteenth signer of the Compact, and was probably a merchant from St. Andrews, London. He and his brother, Edward, were close friends of Thomas Weston. After arriving in Plymouth harbor, he was a member of exploring parties, especially the Third Expedition, which started out 16 December 1620, to locate the place for settlement. Both he and Mrs. Tilley died in the first winter in Plymouth. His daughter, Elizabeth, was placed in the family of Governor John Carver. She was the only one of the seven girls on the Mayflower who could write her own name, and in a good hand.

Known children:

*Henry, b. ; m. Mary Robinson (James).

According to Burke's Armory, Trefethen is a Cornish name. Bardsley in "Dictionary of English and Welsh Names" states, -- The manor of Trefarthian in the parish of Newlyn, near Truro, is the spot of origin. In former times, it ranked among the most distinguished names known in Cornwall.

The first known record of HENRY[1] TREFETHEN in this country is at Newcastle, New Hampshire, originally called Great Island, in 1678. At that time, he was a witness on the bond of Edward Carter. The same year he served on the jury at an inquest, and again in 1679, he had jury duty.

Foster Trefethen, son of Henry, was the ancestor of another Henry Trefethen, who was an early owner of Monhegan Island. All Trefethens seemed to have one trait in common; they preferred to live on islands. The site of the present Portsmouth Navy Yard was earlier known as Trefethen's Island.

PETER[1] TURBAT, Cape Porpoise, took the oath of allegiance to the government of Massachusetts, 5 July 1653. On 12 February 1660, he sold land he had bought from his father-in-law, John Sanders. He and his wife Sarah apprenticed their son Peter to Captain Francis Champernowne, 8 November 1661. His will leaves bequests to wife Sarah, to his sons, John and Peter; and contains the stipulation that his father-in-law, John Sanders, should bring up his daughter Elizabeth. However, two witnesses stated that he revoked this direction before his death, appointing the mother to be the guardian of her daughter.

The immigrants to Broad Bay by the name of Ulmer were JOHANN[1] and his brother, Joh. Jacob. According to Mr. Stahl, they came from Maulbronn in the Duchy of Wurtemberg, Germany. During the French and Indian War, Jacob removed to Marblehead, and his brother John[1] found refuge with him there for a part of the struggle at least. Jacob sold his Waldoboro land and never returned to the settlement. John[1] Ulmer was by profession a schoolmaster and did some teaching at Broad Bay in the early days. It is said that at Louisburg on the night of May 2nd in 1745, he led the Broad Bayers in the successful attack on the arsenal northeast of the harbor which contained great stores of military and naval supplies. He owned much land in the Waldoboro area, which he was able to sell at a profit before removing to Rockland.

In 1740, forty German families from Brunswick and Saxony, tempted by the imposing offers, which the indefatigable Samuel Waldo had made and caused to be circulated in their language, arrived at Broad Bay and laid the foundation for the present town of Waldoboro. Among these early settlers was Johann[1] Ulmer, a native of Ulm, Germany, and his wife from some place in Swabia. With them came JOHN[2] ULMER, JR., a son born in Germany in 1736.

During the next fifteen years, other ships arrived from Germany laden with passengers deluded by Waldo's exaggerated promises. These early settlers, unused to primitive environment, suffered incredible hardships from disease, exposure, scarcity of food, --and to increase their afflictions, they lived in constant fear of Indian attacks. Many of their numbers were killed or taken captive, and many of their cabins were burned. John[1] Ulmer, who possessed a natural fluency of speech, held religious services for those who wished to assemble in his humble log cabin.

The Indians succeeded in destroying this first German colony by 1743; those who survived the raids fled to other settlements. When Colonel Pepperell called for enlistments in the Louisburg expedition in 1745, many of these survivors joined, --among them were John, Jacob, and Martin Ulmer. (The obituary of General George Ulmer states that his father and two uncles were present at the siege of Louisburg.) In about three years, the Germans, gradually returning to Broad Bay, revived their ruined settlement. John Ulmer, Sr. and son John, Jr. owned Lots 4 and 5; this land included nearly all the present business district of Waldoboro village.

Shortly after 1770, shipbuilding was begun in the area. The first ship, a brig of 150 tons called the "Yankee Hero", was built by John Ulmer and his son, John. The plantation of Broad Bay was incorporated as a township in 1773, taking the name of Waldoborough. The Penobscot River became a strategic area at the time of the Revolution, as Britain sought to extend her boundaries. Several by the name of Ulmer served the cause of freedom and fought for independence. General George Ulmer was at Quebec, Ticonderoga, Brandywine, Monmouth, and at the capture of Burgoyne. His father, Captain John, was a private in Captain Philip Ulmer's company, Colonel Samuel McCobb's regiment in the Penobscot expedition in 1779.

After the hostilities were over the Maine seacoast towns grew rapidly. Boundaries were established and roads built. On 9 May 1785, when Waldoboro voted to build a bridge across the Medomak River, Captain John Ulmer, who owned all the land on the eastern side at Lower Falls, promised to give a way across his premises for a road, two rods in width, to the bridge.

In 1794/5, Captain Ulmer removed his family from Waldoboro to "shore village" in East Thomaston, now Rockland, Maine. Here he commenced the business of lime burning, an occupation which grew to be Rockland's most lucrative industry. Almost all of the thirteen children of Captain Ulmer settled on the large tract of land he had taken up with his sons, George and John, Jr. Here they had a fine harbor from which to send their ships laden with lumber and lime to New England ports. Captain Ulmer sold his property in Waldoboro in 1797 to William and Jane Sprowl, and from that time on, Rockland became the principal homesite for his numerous descendants.

The deed is signed by John Butler 2d. and Sarah Butler in token of her relinquishing of dower, she being wife of John.

JOHN[1] WALLIS came to this country with his brother, Nathaniel, in the 1650's. They were early settlers at Casco Bay, John on Purpooduck Point and Nathaniel at Back Cove. Both took the oath of allegiance to the Massachusetts government, 13 July 1658, and both were loyal members of the church of England. John was driven away, seeking refuge in Salem, when the town of Falmouth was ravaged by Indians in 1675. Later he returned and was a selectman there in 1681. After the second Indian attack, he fled to Gloucester where he remained until his death. His wife, Mary, was probably the daughter of Joseph and Dorcas (Wood) Phippen of Dorchester and Falmouth. She later married John Black of Dorchester.

JOSIAH[2] WALLIS with brothers, Benjamin, Joseph, and James, all lived at Purpooduck in Falmouth, Maine, until the destruction of the town, at which time Josiah went to Gloucester. About 1702 he went back to Falmouth, and built a house at Spring Point where his three brothers then lived. The French and Indians, in August 1703, attacked all the settlements from Wells to Casco. The Wallis families were severe sufferers. The wives of Josiah and Benjamin were killed, and Joseph's wife was carried into captivity. Josiah made his escape by swimming across the bay to Black Point, carrying his seven year old son, John, on his back. He again took up his abode in Gloucester and later married again there. His will is dated 31 December 1739; he left his land in Falmouth to his children.

CAPTAIN JOHN[3] WALLIS removed to Falmouth, Maine, in 1745. He was a sea captain and coastal trader. He transported the first four families to Machias in 1763. He was the son who was carried on his father's back in the escape from the Indian slaughter in which his mother was killed. After his marriage in Gloucester and the births of his children there, Captain Wallis returned to Maine. There he took up land holdings situated in Purpooduck, now South Portland, which were once his father's.

Pension Application of Thomas McLaughlin.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

I, Thomas McLaughlin, aged eighty-five years, a citizen of the U. States, born in Londonderry, in New Hampshire, but now resident in Madison in the District of Maine, upon oath testify and declare, that under the commission and in the capacity of a Captain in April 1775 I entered into the service of the war of the revolution, against the common enemy, upon the continental establishment in Col. John Starks' regiment of the New Hampshire line or troops. In this capacity and regiment I continued to serve until February 1776 (in Gen. John Sullivan's brigade) when at Winter Hill by permission of my superior officers, I finally and honorably left the service. I was in the battle of Bunker Hill. My commission is not in my possession, and I am doubtful whether it is now in existence, as I left it many years ago, two hundred miles from me, and I have twice sent for it without being able to find it. It was signed by John Hancock Esq. President of Congress and dated July 1, 1775. From my extreme age, poverty and infirmities I am unable to send again.

From my reduced circumstances, I need the assistance of my country for support. And I do hereby relinquish all my claim to every pension heretofore allowed me by the laws of the U. States if any; but I am ... (remainder of line blurred) ... on any pension list whatever. I request that I may be placed upon the pension list for the District of Maine. I served as above about ten months.

Memorial of James McLaughlin.

To His Excellency Thomas Carleton Esquire, Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Province of New Brunswick &, &, &, - in Council.

The Memorial of James McLaughlin of the Parish of Saint David, in the County of Charlotte - humbly Sheweth

That your memorialist as early as the year 1784 removed, with his Father, and other Loyalists from the State of New Hampshire and Settled in this Parish, - where he intends to spend the remainder of his days.

That he has received Some Land from Government, but owing to its extreme bad Quality, not a Sufficiency to make him a Settlement.

The Memorialist humbly begs leave to aquaint Your Excellency, that Lot No. 2, in block letter D, Fannings Division, was Escheated in June 1800 for nonperformance of Conditions, which Lot if Granted to him, would (with the improvable parts of the lands formerly Granted to him) make him a Comfortable Settlement.

Your Memorialist, therefore, humbly Requests Your Excellency will be pleased, to order a grant to be made out for him of the above mentioned Lot, and your Memorialist as in Duty bound will ever pray -

James McLaughlin

Saint David
19th August 1801

I hereby Certify that the above named, James McLaughlin, is an Inhabitant of the Parish of Saint David, at which place he resided since the year 1784 - and is an honest and industrious man: - he is a good and faithful subject.

Having no knowledge of the situation of the Lot which was heretofore granted to him, I cannot say anything on that Subject - but from the high opinion I entertain of his integrity and veracity, am inclined to think, that he would not insert any thing in his Memorial, that is not founded in truth,

Deposition of Robert Thorndike.

I Robert Thorndike of Camden do testify that in the year of our Lord AD seventeen hundred and sixty eight, I was employed by the Proprietors of Land commonly called the twenty associates to assisn in laying out Land on the Seashore in said Town into Lots (and I acted as a chairman under Fales Esqn. who was principal surveyor) in that year, and in the same year I built an house in said Camden and became a Settler in the Summer of the year 1768. There was no settler in said Town in the month of October, in the same year I became a settler in said Town under said Proprietors, and in the month of December following I built an house in said Town and lived, and my Brother Ebenezer Thorndike in the same month also builded an house in said Camden and afterwards became a Settler. There were no person or persons settled on said Township of Camden except myself and Brother until after March AD 1769 and I believe not until late in the Summer of the same year. And further say not.

Humble Petition of the German Settlers of Broad Bay (Waldoboro) to Governor Shirley of Massachusetts.

Most noble born, most noble grave, most honoured Lord Governor:

Your Exiellenie will excuse the liberte, we poor deserted Germans take, in addressing our most humble petition to you; considering that above 130 Families, containing almost 500 souls, live at Broad Bay, being thus abandoned, that in case there should happen a War (which is the common report) having no Garrison, we must be exposed to the Danger of being killed by the Indians, one after another, in our houses. If we should build 2: or 3: Garrisons meerly (for) any old settlers being provided with provisions for a couple of weeks by themselves and the Newcomers of the yar 1753: by Mr. Waldo: but none of (for) those Settlers that arrived in the yar 1752: we must expect to starve for Hunger: over and besides, for want of Powder, Bullets, and Flints we should (or) can not Defend usself. Therefore we poor Deserted Subjects in common, implore Your Exiel:

Graciousness - regarding you as the Father of the Land - to assist us, your poor children, for the Sake of God, and to deliver us from those miseries. We never shall dare to prescribe your Exiel: what to do, or in what manner we should be saved: your Wisdom will (indicate) to you by what means we poor Deserted Germans must be supported in the aforementioned points, by Your Exiel: Favour. We are in the utmost subjection

I also give and bequeath the undivided two thirds of the half of a lot of land lying the westerly side of the road leading to the head of Owls head bay, to my Sons Andrew & Martin excepting what has been said before. I furthermore give to my wife Mary all my point of land for pasturing her natural life, excepting a road all round the point. Lincoln Records of Knox Lands, Registry of Deeds, Rockland, Me. Book 35, Page 336.

*Note: No record of a second marriage of John Ulmer to a wife Mary has been found. There is documented proof that he married Catherine Remilly, and that she was the mother of his children. It has been suggested that Mary may have been a first name, a fairly common practice in other countries.
